INTRODUCTION.

DURING the last fifty years the National Portrait Gallery, assisted by no endowment, and by few important bequests of pictures, has become unrivalled of its kind. The epochs of Holbein and Van Dyck may be more splendidly illustrated in the Royal Collections, some superb groups of portraits still remain in a few famous houses, but nowhere except in the National Portrait Gallery can the great personalities of English History, from the time of Richard II. to our own day, be viewed in one long chronological sequence.

ARRANGEMENT OF THE COLLECTIONS.—Until the projected extension of the Gallery is realized, want of space constantly renders it necessary to change the position of individual pictures to make room for new acquisitions. Exact reference to places is therefore impossible in the Catalogue, but the visitor will have little difficulty in finding any work if he bears in mind the following general principles :—

1. The top floor contains the principal portraits from Tudor times (Room I.) to the end of the XVIIIth century (Room XII.).

2. The less important portraits stored on the first floor are available only for purposes of reference.

3. The east wing contains portraits of the chief men of letters, men of science, artists, soldiers, statesmen, and explorers of the XIXth century.

4. The ground floor is devoted to miniatures and drawings.

5. The majority of the works of sculpture, together with the unique series of Judges' portraits, are exhibited in the Sculpture Gallery opening out from the Entrance Hall.

SPECIAL FEATURES OF THE COLLECTIONS.—The visitor is recommended to ascend at once to the top floor of the building, where the chronological series begins. There in Room I. he will find a remarkable set of portraits of the great historical personages of the Tudor epoch. Those of Margaret Beaufort, Henry VII., Lady Jane Grey, Sir Thomas Gresham and the small portrait of Henry VIII. are notable examples of the art of the period. Rooms II., III., IV. and V. are devoted to the age of James I. and Charles I.: Room VI. to the principal characters in the Civil War and the Commonwealth; the portrait of Cromwell, by Walker, in particular deserves attention. The next room (VII.) is devoted to the Court of Charles II., and contains an unrivalled series of works by Lely and his contemporaries. Room VIII. illustrates the period of the Revolution, and includes an interesting group of portraits of the later Princes of the House of Stuart. Rooms IX. and X. illustrate the first half of the XVIIIth century; the busts of Hogarth and Colley Cibber by Roubillac deserve special notice. The age of Reynolds and Gainsborough is represented in Room XI., where Chatham, Wolfe and Amherst, Clive and Cornwallis, Burke and Warren Hastings, Fox and Pitt, Johnson and Boswell, Gibbon, Burns and many other famous names have their place. In Room XII. the portraits of Nelson and Lady Hamilton, with the large picture of Sir Sidney Smith at Acre, mark the close of the century. The great feature of the East Wing is the superb collection of XIXth century portraits including many by G. F. Watts. The landings are occupied by portraits of the Royal Family from the accession of George I. to our own times.

HISTORY OF THE COLLECTIONS.—The National Portrait Gallery was founded in 1856, in pursuance of a motion made by Earl Stanhope, P.S.A., in the House of Lords on the 4th of March, 1856.

His Lordship had previously addressed a letter to H.R.H. the Prince Consort, announcing his intention to invite public attention to the importance of forming a British Historical Portrait Gallery, to which His Royal Highness was pleased to return an immediate answer, stating that the scheme had His Royal Highness's entire concurrence.

The motion brought forward in the House of Lords received cordial support, and a resolution was passed in the following terms :—

That an humble Address be presented to Her Majesty, praying that Her Majesty will be graciously pleased to take into Her Royal Consideration the expediency of forming a Gallery of the Portraits of the most eminent Persons in British history.

The Address having been duly presented, the proposal received the full sanction of the Crown, and was carried into effect by the House of Commons, when the Government proposed a grant of 2,000*l.* for the ensuing year, which was voted by Parliament 6th June, 1856. On 2nd December of the same year a Board of Trustees was appointed. Temporary apartments for the reception of the pictures and transaction of business were provided at 29, Great George Street, Westminster. The first day of opening was the 15th January, 1859. At the close of the year 1869, when the number of portraits amounted to 288, the Collection was removed to the Long Building at South Kensington, where it remained till 1885, when it was transferred on loan to the Bethnal Green Museum. In May, 1889, William Henry Alexander, Esq., of Shipton, Andover, Hants, made an offer to H.M. Government to build a National Portrait Gallery at his own expense. The present site was accepted by Mr. Alexander, who appointed Mr. Ewan Christian to be the architect. The building was completed at a cost of 96,000*l.*, of which sum Mr. Alexander provided 80,000*l.* and H.M. Government 16,000*l.*, and was opened to the public on Saturday, April 4th, 1896. In March, 1895, Sir George Scharf K.C.B., who had held the post first of Keeper and Secretary, and latterly of Director, Keeper, and Secretary, from the foundation of the Gallery, resigned his post, and was succeeded by Mr. Lionel Cust, M.A., F.S.A. In September, 1909, Mr. Lionel Cust resigned his post, and was succeeded by Mr. C. J. Holmes.

NOTE.—The illustrations in this List have been arranged in four Sections. The First (Plates I–IX) including Royal Personages and Statesmen; the Second (Plates X–XVII) Men of Action; while the Third and Fourth are given to Famous Women (Plates XVIII–XXI) and to Art, Letters and Science (Plates XXII–XXXIII).

The Historical and Descriptive Catalogue of the Gallery (price 6*d.*) should be consulted for details, and for the names of the persons represented in the larger portrait groups.
